Restaurants are arranged by type of food and distance from the Austin Convention Center.

This restaurant guide was compiled by Steven Self, AHIP, Margaret Peloquin, AHIP, and Catherine Pepper.
Food Trailers

Austin is gaining a reputation as a hub of food trailer culture. Although little gastronomic gems can be found on many corners around town, some vendors of mobile cuisine gather in semi-permanent locations, giving diners the opportunity to try a wide range of dishes in one location.

A useful mobile-friendly site for visually locating trailer locations is Food Trailers Austin (www.foodtrailersaustin.com). A zoomable map shows where trailers and trucks are gathered, plus you can search by keyword, cuisine, or neighborhood. Check this page for links, maps, hours, and contact information.

Popular trailer gatherings can be found in the Rainey Street neighborhood, South 1st Street, The Picnic on Barton Springs Road, and East 6th Street. Yelp! also has a category for food trucks that can help you find a tasty trailer near you.

Navigating Downtown

Even many Austinites don’t know this, but a little knowledge of Texas geography can help you navigate the central part of the city. With the exception of Congress Avenue, the streets that run north to south are named after major Texas rivers and appear in the same order from east to west as they do in the state: Sabine, Red, Neches, Trinity, San Jacinto, Brazos, [Congress], Colorado, Lavaca, Guadalupe, San Antonio, Nueces, Rio Grande. Keep a map of Texas in your head, and you can’t get lost!

Other Useful Foodie Links

This guide necessarily focuses on restaurants in the central Austin area and is by no means comprehensive. If you want to explore more of Austin and the surrounding areas, you might find the following links helpful.

Need One Last Bite?

You won’t find any generic chain food at Austin-Bergstrom International Airport. All restaurants in the terminal are Austin based. So if you want to sample Austin one last time, keep in mind that you can grab something before your flight out from Salt Lick Bar-B-Que, Maudie’s Tex-Mex, Annie’s Cafe, and many other restaurants.
